About This Game

Experience the music in a new way. Feel it pulse around you.
The Polynomial is a 3D space shooter with unique, mathematical scenery that animates to the music. And this is not some boring mathematics. This is fractals. There are worlds to explore, ugly enemies to kill, pretty allies to protect, bonuses to collect, and scores to beat (if you are into this sort of thing). It also includes arena editor and a non-shooting mode in which you can simply explore and rock out to your music. The game comes with 50 minute soundtrack; you can also import your music and playlists or even use the microphone input. There is a great variety of options that you can adjust for your own ultimate visual experience.

Key features:

- Dynamic universe animated to music of your choice or microphone input.

- 50 minutes of original soundtrack.

- Unique 3D graphics and effects.

- Highly configurable visuals, music, and image post-processing.

- Full featured editable music playlist.

- Support for anaglyph 3D glasses and the common 3DTV formats.

- Joystick support.

- Built in arena generator and editor.

- 35 hand-picked arenas.

- 4 music visualizers to choose from.

- Innovative scoring function.

Getting anything consistent going is near impossible for me with these physics. No fun.. Point perfect is a rage game where you are a mouse and you have to detroy enemies, defeat bosses, and complete minigames. In the game you begin with 3 classes: Vitality (You start with 3 lives), Utility (Your attacking square gets larger), and Greed (You get points 30 frames quicker than normal). I think it is a good way to waste time on a Saturday morning and will make your mouse skills increase. I give this game a 9\/10 rating.. Rofl lmfao epic omg. If you like noir and point & click games you will absolutely love this game like I do. The game's atmosphere and the story is very good. The only thing I don't like about this game is voice acting. Definitely worth the money and the time.. there's a free version one :(

Quite cute looking little puzzle game about some cave man loafing around, avoiding damage from everything that moves, and collecting gems to get to the next level. One more remake of the classical Boulderdash, if that ring any bells.

The options menu and the whole gameplay are quite simpistic. The puzzles aren't simple, no! Even the second level might trouble someone with the bad temper, and the third will make you using reload button at least 2-3 times, and then the difficulty will be gradually increase with each level.

Therefore, could I call "Ambers Boom" a good puzzle game? Yes. And no. For some reason, I don't feel the thrill to beat those random levels, to avoid those random-moving spiders and move or break those stones to get those gems. My kids might to, I guess... Or will be bored after only a few levels, just like I did. The game process is just bland trial and error. Some stones will move if you'll walk around them, some will not. Moving obstacles (spiders, worms, beetles or whatever) will be stalking your paths at the pure random algoritm, and the goal will always be the same.

Verdict is 5.5\/10. It will be somewhat good at smartphones, I presume. On the PC, you'll easily find yourself a more suitable, complex and joyful experience, even on the "free-to-play" shattering ground.. Okay well my four year old is smarter than me and I hate this game. Family ruiner. Feeling terrible, fast start mode barely playable, and in Campaign mode, non-consumption of the game is relatively simple, there is consumption of the game often can not be analyzed by the number of peripherals in the target area is mine, completely luck. The situation has deviated from the theme of mine clearance games.. 0/10 after being inspired by this game! Not really! Hilladious fun and runs like a dream on any computer, even bad ones!. The Hotline Miami of pizza delivery. Kind of a one trick pony. I would not pay more than $2 for it, but it is a fun and ridiculous arcade experience. Mix bullethell and Crazy Taxi with the terror that is the Australian Suburbs and you get World's Fastest Pizza. Race around random neighborhoods during "happy hour" dodging gunfire and explosions, being chased by a rabid dog, to deliver the hottest pies in town, then sneak into a dungeon and follow the blood trails to deliver a last-meal to those being held there - leave them to enjoy their pizzas and get out, then drop off your last meatlovers to a peaceful, sober man in the quitest neighborhood in Sydney. A truly absurd game.. Not a bad game.

I've played enough side-scrollers to last me a lifetime, but I gotta say, the jetpack is pretty cool. It allows for a lot of movement options not really afforded by standard gameplay. The powerups coming from money which you then spend to buy stuff is an interesting choice, I dunno if I like it. And the only downside I see to running out of fuel (on which your flamethrower and your jetpack both run off) is not being able to use said flamethrower - your jetpack can continue to 'run on fumes' as it were.

I dunno, obviously you're probably not going to buy this game for this game alone, I expect you're picking it up in a bundle or something.

Mainly, this is a nostalgia game, I think.
